RE: Proceeding 16-106 - Protecting the Privacy of Customers of Broadband and Other
Telecommunications Services

Dear Chairman Wheeler,

You make the claim you are FCC government and we have reason to believe you are color of law corporation; therefor get out of our internet until you prove your claim. Shoe me the flesh and blood person that shows up and takes the responsibility for government. Show me the government you represent.

Your so-called Internet privacy rules, which give a free pass to the Obama Administration's biggest corporate supporter -- Google -- are a sham and an insult to my intelligence.

Google does more to stalk me than any company in the history of civilization. Google's Chairman even admits how little he cares about my online privacy:

"I don't believe society understands what happens when everything is available, knowable and recorded by everyone all the time."_

And just as your net neutrality rules exempt President Obama's multi-billion dollar corporate cronies from having to follow them, your new privacy rules have a Google-sized special interest carve-out, again.

It's government actions like this; making rules to enrich Obama's friends at the expense of the rest of us, that enrages Americans.

Sincerely,
Ronald Charles Vrooman
